Celebrating 60 Years of Industry Inspiration
By Kevin Stiles, President, National Dairy Shrine

This October, during World Dairy Expo, National Dairy Shrine will celebrate its 60th birthday. Sixty years ago, industry visionaries recognized the need to form an organization commemorating dairy’s history and progress, recognizing its leaders and accomplishments, and inspiring our industry’s future leaders. This 60th celebration offers us all the chance to reflect upon those industry leaders who have inspired us to strive to achieve more. They are the leaders who worked to develop new tools for the industry to become more efficient; the breeders who developed the cows that have made our industry progress, and all the outstanding individuals who have made the dairy industry what it is today.

During this birthday celebration we also recognize the future leaders that, while they have accomplished much in their brief early dairy careers, hold so much promise for our industry’s future. Congratulations to these young people; I’ll be watching their careers unfold. More than $30,000 in scholarships and awards will be presented at the National Dairy Shrine Annual Banquet on October 2. Please plan to join us for the Annual Meeting at 4:00 p.m. followed by the Awards Banquet. Your attendance will enable you to meet those people being recognized for their contributions and allow you to gain an appreciation for the role Dairy Shrine plays in our industry.

During these Dairy Shrine activities and other industry events, I often think of the many dairy leaders who inspired me — many of whom were also leaders of, and among those recognized by, National Dairy Shine. The National Dairy Shrine Annual Banquet itself continues to provide inspiration for me each year. I come away from the celebration with a renewed appreciation for our industry and the contributions of so many people who make the industry what it is today. Each time I visit the National Dairy Shrine Visitor Center and Museum in Fort Atkinson, WI, I am inspired by our industry’s rich and amazing history and the people and events chronicled there. I encourage you to also visit while you are in Wisconsin for Expo or at any time during the year.

What reveals itself at the Annual Meeting and Banquet is largely the work of nearly 200 volunteers. These volunteers serve on committees for the selection of the award and scholarship winners, lead the 60th Anniversary efforts, put together the Annual Banquet and silent auction, coordinate our Visitor Center activity, represent Dairy Shrine at various industry events throughout the year, recruit members, develop our media outreach and Web site communications, and much more.

No other organization dedicates such a large percentage of its budget for awards and scholarships. We recognize the donors that, through their contributions, help National Dairy Shrine thrive and grow. These donors include families and individuals like the McCulloughs, Iagers and Rich Denier. We have also received tremendous support from companies and organizations like Dairy Management Inc., Dairy Farmers of America and Hilmar Cheese.

Recently, Elanco Animal Health has joined the list in support of the new Graduate Dairy Production Award. This is our newest award and goes to an active dairyman who graduated from college in the last five years and has already demonstrated excellent dairy management ability. This fall, we also will award our first Core Scholarship. This award, made possible by the many contributions to an endowment honoring past president, executive secretary and friend Maurice Core, is made available to college freshmen. We expect this scholarship to grow into one of our most popular. We also welcome other new partnerships like the one initiated with Manitowoc Milk Producers Cooperative. In 2009, we formed a relationship with this dairy farmer co-op to provide management of their Bill Walters Scholarship Fund. We also work jointly with the Klussendorf Memorial Association and established the Robert “Whitey” McKown Scholarship Fund, made possible by many gifts from his friends.

During the past year, it has been my pleasure to work with Dr. David Selner. This was Dave’s first year as Executive Secretary with Dairy Shrine. He has taken on the role with enthusiasm, organization and competence. Your board of directors was also outstanding as they worked toward organizational goals that were set at the beginning of the year. We are taking steps to update our databases and accounting systems, enhance our Web site and communications tools, and further improve our membership marketing efforts, all while continuing to do all the things core to our organization’s mission. I have confidence National Dairy Shrine will continue to thrive and adapt to our changing industry and be just as inspiring in the next 60 years as it has been for the past 60. It has been a privilege to serve as president of this organization and represent our many inspiring members. Thank you for the honor.
Dr. William Sandine is the Guest of Honor the highest award from the National Dairy Shrine. This award goes to an individual that has had a dramatic impact on the dairy industry and its future. Dr. Sandine had an illustrious career at Oregon State University. He mentored over 70 graduate students and developed several patented processes to improve cheese making and extending the shelf life of cheese and other processed foods. He truly changed the efficiency of the production of cheese. His patents are still being actively used today by cheese plants all over the world.

Duane Conant from Canton Maine. The Conant Acres prefix is known throughout the world for quality Holstein cattle and friendly hospitality. Duane has also served on several Maine and national boards and committees. He has shown great leadership abilities and the foresight to try innovative breeding ideas.

An outstanding judge of dairy cattle, Dr. Ernest Berousek has bred excellent cows in four breeds, judged shows in 26 states, and served as a Jersey classifier. In partnership with his brother, Berousek kept the Lily Lane Guernsey herd going for 30 years while he attended college and pursued an academic career. When he retired from university work in 1966, Berousek built a new herd, selecting cows that fit his unique standards and partnering with other top breeders to house the animals. Berousek was a superb teacher and counselor who mentored many students during his career at Oklahoma State University and the University of Rhode Island. Berousek and his wife, Tela, reside in Yukon, Okla.

Truman Graf served the dairy industry for 33 years as an agricultural economics professor at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Graf and his wife, Sylvia, live in Madison, Wis. He was a prominent figure in regional, national, and international dairy policy discussions during his career and continued active consulting well after his retirement in 1985. State and federal agencies, dairy cooperatives, and industry organizations regularly turned to Graf for his insight on the complex problems of milk marketing.

The late Philip Higley was a pioneer of the artificial insemination industry. Higley’s hard work and belief in the new idea of artificial insemination helped fuel the growth of the organization, which came to be known as American Breeders Service (now ABS Global), and in 1963 he became its first president. Higley worked with the Linde Co. to develop containers cooled by liquid nitrogen that could store semen for technicians, in bulk at the bull stud, and during shipment. Higley was a true pioneer of the A.I. industry.

One of the first to establish international marketing of U.S. genetics, Harry Roth is honored for his pioneering vision for the artificial insemination industry. Roth began his career with Atlantic Breeders Cooperative as a sire analyst and later became general manager. Roth was focused on the principles of cooperation: member governance, user capitalization, and community commitment. Later in his career, Roth saw that member services could be improved by working with other cooperatives. He advocated training for cooperative directors, cooperative education for youth, and provided guidance and support for extension programming. Roth spent his entire career in Pennsylvania and still resides in Landisville.
Progressive Dairy Producers

Brian and Heidi Lantzky

Brian and Heidi Lantzky have demonstrated that even when there isn’t a home farm to go back to, with a plan and a lot of determination, one can begin a dairy and succeed. In 1998, Hei-Bri Jerseys was formed, and the Lantzkys began milking 75 registered Jersey cows on a rented dairy. In 2004, they purchased their own farm in Hawkeye, Iowa, built a 140-cow compost-bedded barn, and remodeled a farrowing barn into a double-12 parlor and a holding pen. Today, the milking herd has nearly doubled from internal herd growth and a few purchases. By hosting tours at their farm, Heidi and Brian and their two daughters, take an active role in educating the public about the dairy industry.

Richard and Jennifer Avila

Richard and Jennifer Avila measure the progress of their 2,100-cow herd by the successful growth of their operation that was achieved without compromising per-cow production, reproductive efficiency, or age of first-lactation animals entering the milking herd. The couple co-founded their dairy in 1993, housing their animals within Jennifer’s parents’ herd — D&E Jerseys, Hilmar, Calif. In 2006, the Avilas made the decision to take their herd and a portion of the D&E Jersey herd and move 1,800 miles to Dalhart, to capitalize on the opening of the new Hilmar Cheese plant. Richard and Jennifer are the sole managers of the Avi-Lanche herd. They are continuing a multigeneration, long-term outlook in the dairy business. They are raising their two daughters, Sidney, 13, and Caitlin, 11, on the farm.

Student Recognition Awards

Nine college students from across the country have been recognized by the National Dairy Shrine for their excellence in leadership skills, involvement in activities, academic accomplishments, and interest in the dairy industry. The student recognition award honors graduating college seniors as they begin their careers or further their education in the dairy industry.

Jennifer Rassler

First place winner, Jennifer Rassler, will graduate in December 2009 from Pennsylvania State University with a degree in animal science. Jennifer has been actively involved in a variety of university activities, serving as co-chair of the 2009 Penn State Youth Judging Contest for the Penn State Dairy Club, and a member of the Penn State Collegiate Cattlewomen. After graduating in December, Jennifer plans to continue a career in the artificial insemination industry as a reproductive or mating consultant.

Aaron Horst

Aaron Horst is this year’s second-place honoree. He is a May 2009 Dairy Science graduate of Virginia Tech. Aaron was very active in his college’s dairy club, serving as vice-president, treasurer, editor of the club’s yearbook, and many other leadership positions within the club. Aaron currently works for ABS Global, Inc. in program support and product development. He looks forward to continuing a career in the A.I. industry and working in sire acquisition.

Andrew Birch

Andrew Birch graduated in May 2009 with an animal science degree from the University of Vermont. In school he was a member of the Dairy Club and served as treasurer. He was also a member of Alpha Gamma Rho Fraternity serving as vice-noble ruler. After graduating, Andrew plans to stay active in the dairy industry. He hopes to one day return home to his family’s operation.

Graduate Dairy Production

Nathan Osborn has been selected as the Graduate Dairy Production winner. This is our newest award and goes to an active dairyman who has graduated from college in the last five years and has already demonstrated excellent dairy management ability. Nathan will receive a $2500 award sponsored by Elanco to be used toward the purchase of cattle to improve his herd.

She has consistently been a Dean’s List student and has stayed involved on campus. Her commitments include Gopher Dairy Club, Midwest American Dairy Science Association (student affiliate division), Intercollegiate Dairy Cattle Judging Team, and Collegiate Agri-Women. She also is secretary of the Minnesota Junior Holstein Association.
McCullough Scholarships
Each year, two scholarships are awarded by National Dairy Shrine in memory of Dr. Marshall E. McCullough, the well-respected nutrition researcher and educator from Georgia. Eligible students must be entering their freshmen year of college and plan to major in dairy/animal science or agricultural journalism with a dairy emphasis. National Dairy Shrine is pleased to announce the 2009 McCullough Scholarship Winners - Angela Boesche of DeKalb, Ill. and Kyle Schirm from West Salem, Ohio.

Angela Boesche, DeKalb, Ill., will receive the $2500 top scholarship to be used towards her continued education at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign in the field of agricultural journalism with a minor in animal science.

Kyle Schirm, West Salem, Ohio, will receive a $1000 scholarship to be used towards his pursuit of a dairy science degree with a business marketing minor at Virginia Tech University.

Maurice Core Scholarship
Danielle Brown of Dodgeville, Wis., has won the first-ever Maurice Core Scholarship to be awarded at World Dairy Expo by National Dairy Shrine. The $1,000 award is given in honor of Maurice Core, the long-time executive secretary of the American Jersey Cattle Association, and, more recently, the executive director of the National Dairy Shrine. The funds for this award were donated by the friends of Maurice Core. The Core Scholarship is given to a freshman status student working toward a degree in dairy or animal science.

Mager Scholarship
The Mager Scholarship for $1000 is awarded annually to a second year student in a two year agricultural school to pursue a career in the dairy industry. It is based on academic standing, leadership ability, interest in the dairy industry and plans for the future. The recipient this year is Ariel Garland from Northfield, Massachusetts. She is attending SUNY Cobleskill and majoring in Dairy Cattle Management. This scholarship was started by a generous donation from the Charles and Judy Jager family of Fulton, Maryland.

Klussendorf/McKown Scholarship Winners
Robb Bender of Cleveland, Wis., and Maureen Lee of Johnson Creek, Wis., have been named the 2009 Dairy Shrine-Klussendorf Association Scholarship Award winners and Matthew Mitchell of LaFollette, Tenn., has been named the first Whitey McKown Scholarship winner.

Robb Bender
The first recipient, Robb Bender, has taken a progressive role in the future of the dairy industry through his commitment to the farm and reproductive research at UW-Madison. Bender will enter his third year this fall at UW-Madison with a major in dairy science and a special interest in reproduction. Bender hopes to use cutting edge technology and research to increase conception rates in the dairy cow and utilize his findings on his own operation in the future.

Maureen Lee
Maureen Lee resides on a small farm consisting of 20 head of registered Holsteins, Brown Swiss, and Jerseys. After completing her undergraduate work at Cornell University, Maureen hopes to pursue a law degree to become an advocate for agriculture. While this is Maureen’s main goal, she wants to continue breeding and developing her small herd of cattle.

Matthew Mitchell
The first Whitey McKown Scholarship winner is Matthew Mitchell. Matthew’s dairy experiences span the entirety of his 20 years. He will be attending the University of Tennessee this fall to pursue his degree in animal science. Matthew has had four All-American Nominations and 22 Junior All-American Nominations. His long-term goal is to continue to manage and develop his herd of elite Registered Holsteins.
One of the early auction items is a beautiful porcelain Llandro MilkMaid donated by Duane Norman.
